January 8, 2010

John Ravits, MD, FAAN

Director of Neurophysiology Laboratory
Department of Neurology
Virginia Mason Medical Center
Seattle, WA

TOPIC:

“ALS Focality: Finding Motor Neuron Degeneration in a House of Mirrors”

OBJECTIVE:

To discuss the phenotype heterogeneity of ALS and show how it may be explained by fundamental and unified principles, especially focal and contiguous spreading of neuropathology in confined anatomic compartments of the CNS. In turn, this suggests cardinal features of underlying molecular processes and also possibilities of studying them directly with new genomic technologies.
